If you’ve never been a part of the Rock Chalk Chant, one of KU’s greatest traditions, experience it now.
irua.ku.edu/chant

Our chant transforms us into a chorus. A force for good. A family. A “we.”

If a project or subject poses a challenge, Jayhawks can turn to fellow students who tutor writing, math, and other subjects for the university.

STARTING SUCCESSFULLY
Programs created by the International Student Services office will ease your transition into the United States. After you arrive at KU, you’ll participate in the weeklong You at KU International Student Orientation, where, you will

• Get help enrolling in classes
• Tour the KU campus and the city of Lawrence
• Get your KU identification card, called a KU Card
• Discuss U.S. culture, customs, and adjustment
• Attend sessions on legal issues, maintaining your immigration status, safety, campus resources, health, clubs and organizations, and other topics

You’ll also attend Jayhawk Jumpstart, a program for all new KU students on health, wellness, and social justice. Before the semester begins, you’ll go to Hawk Week, the official welcome week for new students. At Hawk Week, you’ll learn about student organizations, university programs, and KU traditions. Hawk Week activities include a job fair, movies, dances, and free food.

SEEKING SUPPORT
You’ll continue to receive support during the year through a series of ISS programs that introduce you to the United States and KU and allow you to present your culture to the campus. Also, an ISS student resource coordinator can help you learn time management skills and adjust to the challenges of attending a major U.S. university.

UNDERSTANDING STATUS
Experienced immigration advisors at the International Student Services office will help you manage your immigration status to keep your educational experience on track. They are experts in F-1 and J-1 regulations and will assist you in getting permission to work on or off campus.
Like a discovery, our chant breaks silence, rousing the ready to action.

In the 2016 Review of Public University Honors Programs, KU’s was one of only 11 nationwide to receive a perfect score.

ENRICHING YOUR EDUCATION
No matter which of our 200-plus fields of study you choose, you’ll expand the breadth of your academic pursuits through programs that challenge and inspire you:

• The Office of Study Abroad helps students take their education to new places, and supports those students with $400,000 in scholarships every year. studyabroad.ku.edu
• University Honors Program participants receive personalized advising and priority enrollment, take small honors courses, and have opportunities for scholarships and honors housing. honors.ku.edu

You’ll discover even more programs that fit your plans as you progress toward graduation.

BRANCHING OUT
As you work toward your degree, an experiential learning certificate can lead you down unanticipated avenues and help shape your interests and values. KU offers seven certificates:

• Service Learning
• Entrepreneurship
• Arts Engagement
• Global Awareness
• Leadership Engagement
• Research Experience
• Sustainability

All certificates require a combination of coursework, real-world experiences, and reflection. experience.ku.edu

DECIDING WHAT TO STUDY
Some students arrive at KU knowing exactly what they’ll major in. Others are still deciding. We can help you no matter what your situation is.

If you’re still deciding, talk to your advisor about courses that sound interesting. Your schedule will include some required general education courses and some courses that allow you to explore your interests. Almost every program has built-in time to take classes that will help you decide on a major while counting toward a degree program and keeping you on schedule for graduation.
Our alumni include international CEOs and leaders like Colombian president Juan Manuel Santos, who won a 2016 Nobel Peace Prize.

Kansas City, just east of Lawrence, is home to major corporations, a tech-fueled start-up culture, an international airport, and tens of thousands of Jayhawk alumni.

Undergraduate international students may enter KU in one of three ways — through the Applied English Center, the Academic Accelerator Program, or standard entry. Your entry to the university will depend on your English skills, need for academic support, and readiness for U.S. college course work.

APPLIED ENGLISH CENTER
The AEC offers English language instruction for speakers at every level taught by instructors with master’s or doctoral degrees. AEC students practice speaking in small conversation groups and participate in activities and events that increase their understanding of U.S. culture. The AEC also provides comprehensive advising services to help students adjust to the U.S. educational system and prepare them for academic success.

Your scores on the English placement exams you take here will determine whether you need this intensive English preparation or can start your degree course work immediately. Depending on your academic major, you may be eligible to earn up to nine academic credits for the upper level English language courses that you complete.

You may apply to study in the AEC program, even if you aren’t planning to become a degree-seeking student. There are a variety of short- and long-term options available for non-degree students, as well as those planning to complete their degree at KU. When you’ve successfully completed the AEC program and decide you would like to continue your studies, you can enter KU’s Academic Accelerator Program or apply for standard entry to KU as a degree-seeking student.

ACADEMIC ACCELERATOR PROGRAM
In the AAP, you can take freshman-level courses and get academic support, including advanced academic English instruction, that’s tailored to your needs. You may be in the program from one to three semesters depending on your level of English proficiency. accelerator.ku.edu

STANDARD ENTRY
Students applying for standard entry into KU may be admitted directly to their chosen major of study without meeting a minimum English proficiency requirement. You may qualify for enrollment in academic course work by providing English proficiency through one of the many accepted waiver options during the application process or by taking the English placement exam during your at KU International Orientation once you arrive on campus. Depending on your test results, you might take one to four semesters of comprehensive English or you might be able to start your degree courses immediately. Learn more about all available English proficiency waiver options at irua.ku.edu/english-requirements
